- In connection with the incidents of substandard edible fats and oils in Taiwan in 2014, the Centre for Food Safety (CFS) of the Food and Environmental Hygiene Department (FEHD) has since then suspended the import into Hong Kong of all edible fats and oils (of animal or plant origins) produced in Taiwan.
- Having considered the investigation reports, inspection results and surveillance figures in relation to the incidents provided by the relevant Taiwanese authority, CFS has made the assessment and lift the import suspension on edible fats and oils (of animal or plant origins) produced in Taiwan in March 2019.
- CFS will continue to monitor closely edible fats and oils imported from Taiwan to safeguard food safety and public health.
